

Minerva Access is the Institutional Repository of The University of Melbourne

Author/s:

Nansen, B;Gould, H;Arnold, M;Gibbs, M

Title:

Media, mortality and necro-technologies: Eulogies for dead media

Date:

2023-08-01

Citation:

Nansen, B., Gould, H., Arnold, M. & Gibbs, M. (2023). Media, mortality and necro-technologies: Eulogies for dead media. New Media and Society, 25 (8), pp.2163-2182. <https://doi.org/10.1177/14614448211027959>.

Persistent Link:

<https://hdl.handle.net/11343/311342>

Calibri Light 16

A A B I U [highlight] [underline] [color] [font color] ...

[bulleted list] [numbered list] [left indent] [right indent] [list style]

[font face] [font size] [find] [copy] [paste] [undo] [redo] [help] [more]

Media, mortality, and necro-technologies: eulogies for dead media

Bjørn Nansen
Media and Communications
University of Melbourne
Australia
nansenb@unimelb.edu.au

Hannah Gould
Anthropology
University of Melbourne

Michael Arnold
History and Philosophy of Science
University of Melbourne

Martin Gibbs
Computing and Information Systems
University of Melbourne

Abstract

Working at the intersection of death studies and media studies, this paper examines what we can learn from the death of media technologies designed for the deceased, what we refer to as necro-technologies. Media deaths illuminate a tension between the promise of nersistence and